The following are the requirements for the index page of your site. The page should be called index.html and be in the root of your hierarchy. The page should build on the template that you created earlier; Therefore, those requirements are not repeated here.

Body
The body of the page should contain at least two sections, each with at least one heading. One heading an appropriate heading such as "Welcome to my website" or similar content to indicate where the visitor has landed. The content of that section should be appropriate for your heading. The other section might contain information relevant such as news about yourself.

Sidebar
The sidebar on the index page should be styled so that it stands out prominently. The content of the sidebar will be added later by JavaScript.
